

Open a new MT5 Real Synthetic account on our new servers

We have been working tirelessly to improve our Synthetic indices offering to our clients and partners, and we have recently created additional servers to improve your experience.

Faster speeds and better performance

Our MT5 platform now offers various servers that are geographically purposed to ensure you get the best speeds and optimal performance based on where in the world you trade from. We now offer servers across Europe and Africa to bring you a seamless trading experience.

To benefit from a server closer to you, you will need to create a new MT5 Synthetic account, follow the steps below on how to do this. We have also addressed any other questions you may have further in this blog!

How do I make a new account on a new server?

Step 1

Now you can begin trading and transferring your funds to your MT5 synthetic account.

Below we have listed any other questions you may have.

How do I transfer money from my old MT5 synthetic account?

You can transfer funds from your previous MT5 account by moving the funds from your previous MT5 account into your Binary account, then from there, move them to your new MT5 account. Simple!

Can I still use my previous MT5 account?

You can, however we recommend using your new one for the best speed and performance we can offer you on our platform.

Will my log in details remain the same?

Yes, your Binary account remains the same, you have just added another MT5 account on a different server to enhance your experience, we hope you enjoy it!

Will the MT5 platform change?

Absolutely not, our platforms remain the same for you.

Do I need to open additional accounts on any of your other platforms?

No, all your other accounts can remain the same.
